UNIT 9

Reflection 1.

-Which existing websites out there most inspired your web site design thus far?
Pretty much every site on this web page.
http://www.awwwards.com/

-Which parts of the design are you most proud of?
The responsive design, learning that was super fun.

-What struggles did you encounter in your design process?
Trying to define the hierarchy and flow of the page.

-Which struggles did you encounter during page development?
More just working out sizing and putting things where they have to go.

–What did you learn from making your project responsive?
That it is a very important part of user experience by making things work on different platforms.

Refection 2

Group 1 website.
http://www.sagmeisterwalsh.com/

I really love the overall flow of this site.
The vertical column layout, gives a feeling of really a news article which in a way works but it also makes for a lot us unnecessary scrolling up and down the page.

Love the nav bars on all the pages .Maybe the nav on index page could show a hover of some sort letting you know what you're clicking on.

Also the typography is perfect for the look of the site, I love it.

Group 2.

http://www.spectrumpowderworks.com/

First I would start my defining the hierarchy of the index page by putting a description on what this company actually does. Maybe a photo of some sort, something that catches the eye straight away telling you that you have come to a powder coating company website.

Over all flow is fine, maybe change the typography in the logo to something a little more simple, easy to read, but as the name of the company doesn't quite describe the companies services id try not to distract the user to mush to that.
